

Please be assured of my appreciation for your efforts to combat a real nuisance; however, we in IN have a very effective law in place now. Please do not do anything that would hinder its effectiveness or water it down. I was constantly being bombarded with calls around the evening mealtime here at my home; I now can eat dinner with my wife uninhibited by unnecessary and unwanted phone calls solicitations. Up until the recent elections, I had not received a single solicitous phone call for several weeks during those hours. I have a real concern that, since Indiana's law has been so very effective, that the FCC will preempt that law with something less effective that will bring those interruptive calls back, and I really would not appreciate that. Thank you for considering my viewpoint in this matter.
